INFO

The new, fourth album of SLAM & HOWIE and the reserve men is called "Renegade".

Lt Slam, Bennet Young, Ringo, Django and Ross are far from renegades.

The Swiss band is playing like mad (over 450 concerts in five years) and stays true to itself, however new facets to their songs are added but unmistakably sounds like their very own style.

With their musical bastard out of country, rockabilly, americana and punk rock Slam & Howie and the reserve men always presented themselves wild, raw and fresh.

"Renegade" surprises with an extra level of depth and complexity. The songs are more mature, more delicate, broader and more self-confident. The five musicians know their strengths and jump into the fray focussed and motivated.

Diversification is emphasized also by the producers: Dave Hofmann and Frank Niklaus (Heidi Happy, The Sad Riders, Coal, etc.).

What we love about SLAM & HOWIE and the reserve men is their unpredictability. Every time you think you got their concepts, they abscond and abandon the horsemen - snotty, sassy, winking and mischievous, proving they're renegades.

Rejecting common song formats, musical laws and audience's expectations.

"What sounds good, is good and will be adopted regardless of whic style it is" comments Lt. Slam.
There is nothing more to add....
